

THEORIZING THE WEB

CONFERENCE APRIL 14, 2012 UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND
cyborgology.org/theorizingtheweb #TtWI2

Participants Include: Andy Carvin (NPR) and Zeynep Tufekci

The second annual Theorizing the Web conference aims to expand the range and depth of theory used to help us make sense of how the Internet, digitality, and technology have changed the ways humans live. We will bring together researchers from a range of disciplines, including sociology, communications, anthropology, philosophy, economics, English, history, political science, information science, the arts and many more. There will be 10 panels, art installations and a keynote conversation between Andy Carvin of NPR News and Zeynep Tufekci, professor at University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.
